

The Tinted Venus by F. Anstey

When a young newly engaged man finds himself bound for an amusement garden with an old flame, not his fiancée, it is not surprising that he still feels some attraction for her. When they escape the heat of the dance floor to walk among the trees in the garden, it is not surprising that they should come upon a statue of a woman of uncommon beauty, with the smallest hands. When the young man attempts to demonstrate that his absent fiancée has hands even smaller than this immortalized stone woman, it is surprising when the engagement ring he is carrying fits easily on the stone finger, but does not easily come off. There are many surprises to come with this sculpted woman and the all too lively young lady from his past.

Read by Don W. Jenkins
Total running time: 05:47:41

This recording is in the public domain and may be reproduced, distributed, or modified without permission. For more information or to volunteer, visit librivox.org. Cover picture by Jean-Léon Gérôme, detail of Pygmalion and Galatea (c. 1890). Copyright expired in U.S., Canada, EU. and all countries with author's life +70 yrs laws. Cover design by Mary Kay. This design is in the public domain.

The Tinted Venus by F. Anstey